To answer this I will highlight some of the possible targets in modern digitized states, democratic or not, and the means with which these targets can, and have been attacked. Throughout the paper I will show that, if there is any doubt about motivation, attacks on these very targets by civilian Hackers have been carried out ever since the whole phenomenum started. The question that has to be answered though is that of the reality and probability of cyberterror . Here the rationale is that if cyberattack is feasible, and if the means...
